

I am swimming to the buoy.

Attack, strike, fracture, slam, surface, seek, scream, appear, wrestle, grip

I am swimming to the buoy as I am under attack. The large animal slams my body to the ocean floor as I am dragged through the coarse sand. I wrestle with the shark as I punch and kick until my body feel useless. The sunlight peaks through the dark, threatening water as I surface, gasping for air. With the little amount of breath I have left, I muster a scream for help. Another strike to my leg and I can feel my bones fracture sporadically from my hip down to the tips of my toes. Seeking any form of assistance, I heave my limp body onto a nearby rock sticking out from the coral reef. I grip my bleeding leg as the blood travels steadily down to my feet into the murky water. I see the gray dorsal fin appear as I prepare for my next fight.